To the House of Representatives: entitled "For the relief of Fitz John can college. - Boston Post. Porter," I berewith return it with my objections, to the House of Congress in delphia lady, a beautiful little Episcois in the terms following: "That the President be, and he is hereby authorized to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Fitz John Por-Volunteers, and a Brevet Brigadier-Gen- nnc. eral and Colonel in the army, to the posibecome a law it will create a new office which can be filled by the appointment of involves an encroachment by the legislative brauch of the Government on the authority of the Executive. As Congress has no power under the Constitution to nominate and appoint an officer, and can not lawfully impose on the President the duty of nominating and appointing to office any particular individual of its own selection this bill, if it can fairly be construed as requiring the President to make the nomination, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the appointment which it authorizes, is in manifest violation of the Constitution, If such be not its just interpretation it must be regarded as a mere enactment of advice and counsel, which lack, in the general officers of distinguished character and ability. Its investigation of the charges of which it found accused guilty, regularity of all its proceedings, are matters which have never been brought in question. Its judgment, therefore, is final and conclusive in its character. The Supreme Court of the United States has recently declared that a court martial such as this was "Is the organism provided by law, and clothed with the duty of administering justice in this class of cases. Its judgments, when apsurrounded by the same considerations which give conclusiveness to the judgments of other tribunals, including as well the lowest as the highest." It follows accordingly that when a lawfullyconstituted court-martial has duly de clared its findings and its sentence, and the same have been duly approved, neither the President nor Congress has any power to set them aside. The existence of such power is not openly asserted nor, perhaps, is it necessarily implied it the provisions of the bill which is before me, but when its enacting clauses are read in the light of the recitals of its pre ambles, it will be seen that it seeks in ef fect the practical annulment of the flud ings and sentence of a competent court martial. A conclusion at variance with these findings has been reached after investigation by a board of three officers of the army. This board was not created In pursuance of any statutory authority, and was powerless to compe the attendance of witnesses or to pro nounce a judgment which could be lawfully enforced. The officers who composed it in their report to the Secretary of War, dated March 19, 1879, state that in their opinion "Justice requires * * such action as may be necessary to annul and set aside the findings and sentence of the court-martial in the case of Major-General Fitz John Porter, and to restore him to the posl tions of which their sentence deprived him, such restoration to take effect from date of his dismissal from the service." The provisions of the bill now under consideration are avowedly based on the assumption that the findings of the court martial have been discovered to be erroneous, but it will be borne in mind, that the investigation which is claimed to have resulted in this discovery was made many years after the event to which these findings related, and under circumstances that made it in possible to reproduce the evidence of which they were based. It seems to me that the proposed legislation would establish a dangerous precedent, calculated Porter to hold an office of trust or proft by the eight-o'clock breakfast-bell, he under the Government of the United said: States. But I am unwilling to give ny sanction to any legislation which shall practically annul and set at naught the solemn and de iberate conclusions of the tribunal by which he was convicted, and of the President by whom its findings were examined and approved. [Signed] CHESTER A. ARTHUR. Executive Mansion, July 2,1884. Frightfully Mangled.
